

Quantum Structure Infrared Photodetectors (QSIP) International Conference

Dear Partners,

the QSIP is one of the leading worldwide conferences for the presentation of innovations in quantum structure based infrared photodetectors (QSIP) technologies, including quantum wells, dots, superlattices, and novel heterostructures, has led to the realization of high performance infrared detectors, large-format focal plane arrays and infrared cameras. The QSIP 2022 conference aims to bring together scientists, engineers, industrial collaborators, students, and users to discuss recent advances in this field. The conference will provide an international forum for attendees to present and discuss new progress in device physics, materials growth and processing issues, focal plane array development and characterization, as well as commercialization and applications of QSIP technologies. In addition, the conference will also explore the benefits and drawbacks of these technologies, and clarify their role in the competitive market of thermal imaging technology. The program will include oral presentations, panel discussion and opportunities for informal interactions among conference participants.
